About me

I was born and raised in Denmark and started rowing by chance. Fell in love with the sport instantly during a learn to row weekend, and can easily say that rowing has changed my life. Being on the Danish national team and pulling good erg scores caught the eye of some US college coaches, and I was offered a full athletic scholarship for USC. After graduating USC with a BA in Social Science, I worked 3 years in a group home for emotionally disturbed teenage girls. In 2007 I moved to Long Beach and was thrilled to be able to row at LBRA. I started coaching the Masters, Juniors and indoor rowing classes then called Rowbics now Powerhouse Fitness. I had to stop coaching the juniors and indoor rowing classes when I got pregnant with my son in 2010, but was able to continue coaching the masters on a part time basis. I thoroughly enjoy sharing my passion for rowing, and hope to continue to train and race for the rest of my life.
